INDOOR AIR QUALITY

Dust, pollen, mold, and tobacco smoke can irritate the lungs. The quality of air inside our home is an important part of our health.

LEAD EXPOSURE

Homes built before 1978 that have cracking, chipping, or peeling lead paint can create lead dust; often a source of lead poisoning.

FIRE SAFETY

Smoke alarms and carbon monoxide detectors are some of the simplest resources that can keep our home safe and protected.

RESIDENTIAL INJURIES

Vulnerable individuals, such as babies, children or older adults, can be susceptible to trips, falls and injuries.

ASTHMA & ALLERGY

Pollution, animal dander, dust mites, aerosolized particles, etc., can be triggers for asthma and allergy related conditions.

PEST CONTROL

Cockroaches, bed bugs, mice, and other pests are a health concern in the home. Some pests can pose a serious health risk.

THE HEALTHY NEIGHBORHOODS PROGRAM...

- Provides assistance and education to address home safety concerns.
- Helps make a home safer, healthier, and cleaner with cleaning and safety products and resources.
- Refers residents to organizations, if needed and assists with future concerns, if they begin.

All program participants receive a bucket of cleaning and safety supplies!
